David Alan's fascination with the sea and its many inhabitants shines through his work — literally. Combining the ancient art of sand carving with a modern computerized touch, David Alan's images sparkle with a refractive quality that makes his work burst into life.

"Glass is a superb medium to work with," David Alan explains. "I love creating the illusion of movement within the material by building a three-dimensional effect that makes each piece unique." This is accomplished by his hand crafting each piece with fine grain silica to add depth and character.

David Alan's work has been recognized around the world and he has received extensive accolades for his artistic style. Based in Southern California, David Alan's work is represented throughout the recreational scuba diving community, numerous fine art organizations and a variety of multinational corporations. His company, Glass Impressions, markets a wide range of products showcasing David Alan's unique and distinctive images.
